Opis choroby *

Definicja

Recurrent Neisseria infections due to factor D deficiency is a rare, genetic, primary immunodeficiency disorder characterized by an increased susceptibility to  Neisseria  bacterial infections, resulting from complement factor D deficiency, typically manifesting as recurrent respiratory infections, recurrent meningitis and/or septicemia. Patients typically present fever, purpuric rash, arthralgia, myalgia and undetectable complement factor D plasma concentrations.

Dane

Klasyfikacja Choroba

Kod ORPHA 169467

Kod OMIM 613912

Kod ICD10 D84.1

Kod ICD11 4A00.1Y

*Źródło

orphanet