

Opis choroby *

Definicja

A rare headache resulting from a cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) leak with subsequent lowered CSF pressure, characterized clinically by severe headaches which typically worsen upon standing up and get better when lying down. Additional features may include neck stiffness, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, tinnitus, visual disturbances, and cognitive abnormalities, among others, as sagging and displacement of the brain can lead to a variety of lesions and symptoms.

Dane

Klasyfikacja

Choroba

Synonimy

Spontaneous cerebrospinal fluid leak
Spontaniczny wyciek płynu mózgowordzeniowego

Kod ORPHA

443180

Kod OMIM

-

Kod ICD10

G96.0

Kod ICD11

8D61.0

*Źródło

orphanet